Center for Policing Equity Releases Statement On FBI Director James Comey's Georgetown Address

LOS ANGELES, CA -- Today, Center for Policing Equity President and Co-founder Dr. Phillip Atiba Goff released the following statement following Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI) Director James Comey's speech at Georgetown University on policing and race:

"The Center for Policing Equity applauds FBI Director James Comey for his remarks today on the state of police-community relations in the United States. We are proud to be a part of many of the initiatives Director Comey mentioned today, working alongside the Department of Justice (DOJ), the Administration, and municipal police departments across the country to better equip our law enforcement officials.

"Nationwide, our law enforcement agencies have taken critical steps toward adopting evidence-based approaches to ensure equity. These approaches are the foundation of CPE's National Justice Database, the cornerstone of DOJ's National Initiative, and the most important element to ensuring long and sustainable change in policing and community engagement. We look forward to continuing this important work together."
